DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 1-28 are allowed.

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: The present invention is directed to a method, apparatus and computer readable medium for preventing a TCP RST network attack. More specifically, independent claims 1, 4, 16, 20-25 recite similar claim language identifying uniquely distinct features: receiving a packet in which an RST bit of a TCP header is set, then determining whether a sequence value in the packet is within a range of allowed sequence values; then if the sequence value is within the range of sequence values, sending an ACK without closing a TCP connection associated with the flow. The closest prior art, as found in AAPA in OpenBSD implementation of TCP under UNIX, discloses a guard against a Reset attack by requiring that the Reset packet carry a sequence number that is exactly the next expected sequence number, and not just within the expected window. If a Reset packet carries a sequence number that is not an exact match, the TCP process ignores the Reset packet and does nothing. However, the OpenBSD implementation does not teach that when the sequence value in the packet containing the Reset bit is within the range of allowed sequence values, sending an acknowledgement message without closing the TCP connection. Further, when the next packet of a flow in which the Reset bit is set comprising a second sequence value in which the aforementioned value is equal to an expected sequence value, then the TCP connection is closed.

The art considered from the IDS submitted 9/6/2006 does not overcome the reasons for allowance as stated above. Specifically, US Patent Application No. 2002/0101819 is silent to the reset bit and sequence values. As to "Transmission Control Protocol Security Considerations" by Stewart, it would overcome the reasons for allowance, but the instant application was filed before the document was published.

The prior art, taken singly or in combination, fails to anticipate or fairly suggest the limitation of applicant's independent claim, in such a manner that a rejection under 35 USC 102 or 103 would be proper. The claimed invention is therefore considered to be in condition for allowance as being novel and nonobvious over the prior art.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
